TOWN TALK.

The Ogden Tabernacie choir of 150 voices will arrive here over the Rio Grande Western on Sunday at 5:49 a.m. The singers are on their way to southern Utah on ere outline.

P. J. Woolf was arrested by Sergeant Felinger on a warrant yesterday after-noon, charging him with assault and bat-tery. The case will come up before Judge Wenger loday, Secretary Walton of the state land board left for his home in Cache county yesterday afternoon and will be away until the Fourth, when he will come down and enjoy the parade.

The old stereotyped assurance that the joint building elevator will be completed in a couple of days was given out again yesterday. The iron work of the passenger car is now being painted.

The Triangle Cyclers will make their regular weekly run tonight, Bountiful beding the objective point. Berries have been ordered at the Peck farm-house, and the boys expect to have a jolly time.

Fred G. Palmer has the seats for the carnival nearly completed on the cast side of the street at the west entrance of the joint building grounds and will have the entire work fluished by Monday at noon. The United States government has furnished the state land board with a full and complete set of the geological surveys from the time they were begun. Among the works are several books which treat upon the formation of Utah.

A certified copy of the articles of incorporation of the Home Insurance company was filed with the county elerk yesterday, together with a certificate appointing Glen Miller resident agent for Utah, on whom process may be served.

Rev. A. L. Hudson will speak tomorrow morning at Unity hall upon "A Year's Work Together and its Significance." This will close the services at Unity for the current church year and Mr. Hudson will go east for a two months' vacation.

The Blue Church propie are attanging

The Blue Church people are arranging for a float in the parade on the Fourth and will appear in good style. All members of the society are requested to appear at headquarters today. No. 46 East Second South, for consultation with the authorities.

A westoring party at the home of John P. Sovenson, 513 Sixth screet, last night, was disturbed by a crowd of boys, who got into the kitchen and stole the loc croum and other refreshments. The particl wagon was sent for, but no arrests were made, the hoodlums having dispersed.

Ban Loftus has imported a badge for the Pourth of July which is emphatic and unique. It is composed of a new Amer-lean flag with the forty-five stars and the cracked Liberty bell together with a little red schoolhouse. This badge is very popular in the east, but will not be ex-tensively worn here, as Dan has the only one sent to the city and it is too late to phace orders.

Dr. Faust and H. L. Driver are men with long faces. They are the designers and originators of the miner's float in the parade, and when Bacon's bank falled had $50 to the credit of the affair in the safe. Both were yesterday looking around among the mining men to secure the cash to pay for the same and wondering who would contribute. The float is a good one and will attract a great deal of attention.

lack Scott, who also enjoys the distinction of being called "the Mercur terror," was arrested yesterday by Deputy Shertiff Gibbs and Steele and locked up in the county jail. The "terror" had been making threads to perforate a bartender Thursday night, for which he was to have appeared in Justice Harvey's court yesterday. He failed to do so, however, and that is the reason he now finds himself behind the bars of the county bastile.

The result of the examination of teachers he'd on June 16 and 17 shows that of the applicants for full examination, nine received renewable certificates and ten non-renewable certificates, while seven failed. Fifty-six candidates registered for primary certificates, and of these two received renewable certificates, twelve non-renewable certificates, while seventeen failed. Of the applicants for renewing certificates, twenty-one were successful certificates, twenty-one were successful while four were unsuccessful.

Street Rumors of a More or Less Au- W. thentle Nature-The City's Deposit Talked Of a Good Deal-The Mercur People Reported as Feeling Very Bitter Against Mr. Bacon

While nothing of any sensational or startling nature developed yesterday in the failure of the Bank of Salt Lake still it continued to be the chief subject for street talk. The announcement in yesterday morning's papers that fraud was charged in connection with the assignment did not seem to

with the assignment did not seem to surprise the majority of people. The interest now centers in the receivership suit. While there are all sorts of rumors afloat to the effect that the Bacons had a large amount of money on deposit in an eastern bank, the fact of the matter is that nothing definite is known about it. It is simply a statement which may or may not prove true. Those who were credited with having knowledge about this ited with having knowledge about this money are unwilling to talk, dismissing the reporters with the suggestion that something is going to develop in a few days. If the interested crediturs a few days. If the interested creditors succeed in securing the appointment of a receiver, which is not entirely unlikely, it will be an easy matter for experts to determine if there has been any crookedness going on. While Mr. Bacon in his statement to the public courts such an investigation it is natural that he should be considerably disturbed over the turn affairs have taken.

For some reason or other there is

For some reason or other there is more talk about the loss of the money belonging to the city than that of any of the depositors. Of course the city will not lose anything. Arrangements have already been made so that Treasurer May's bondsmen will make good the loss. Mr. McCornick and Mr. Dooly, the bankers, are two of his principal sureties. Mr. May has had several seances with these gentlemen since the bank closed its doors, and it is stated that an interesting time was is stated that an interesting time was had between the treasurer and his backers. According to rumors neither Mr. McCornick or Mr. Dooly were aware that Jack May had any of the aware that Jack May had any of the city's money on deposit in Bacon's bank. Added to these are other rumors more or less authentic. It will be well remembered that Mr. May was appointed frustee to hold the 411,000 special appropriation to the gravity sewer contractors. There was a great deal of trouble before the money was paid over. When finally, however, everything was settled, the court having dissolved the injunction and the council passed the appropriaand the council passed the appropria-tion over the mayor's veto, so that there was no apparent excuse why the money should not be paid over. Treas-urer May still refused to settle. The matter went on for almost two weeks in this manner, and this after May's bondsmen and atterneys had advised bondsmen and attorneys had advised him to pay over the money.

Mr. Hobson, one of the contractors, says he saw Mr. May every day and asked him for the money. He met with all sorts of excuses, and one day Mr. May told him that he could not draw the money for the reason that it would embarrass the bank. Mr. Hob-son took no stock in this statement at the time, thinking it was only an excuse to delay payment. Mr. May when asked about the mat-ter denied that he had ever made such a statement. It is preposterous he says, for if he had known that the bank was in a tottering condition he would certainly not have gone to work and deposited money just prior to the Expressions of sympathy for Mr. May are heard on all sides, as the loss which he will ultimately make good to his bondsmen is large.

M. E. Mulvey who is one of the Mulvey who is one of the sufferers, was seen last evenasked for new deve He said there were none so far but that he expected things to assume an that he expected things to assume an interesting state within a few days.

"We are fighting hard to get a receiver now," he said. If we are successful experts will at once be put to work on the books and if there has een any crooked transactions we will

That was all Mulvey wanted to say for publication, though from the tenor of the conversation that followed the reporter gleaned the information that the bottom has not been reached yet.

One of the rumors going the rounds yesterday was to the effect that the sheriff had opened the safe at the bank and several versions as to what was and several versions as to what was found—or rather not found—were siven. As a matter of fact, the safe was not opened at all. The vault was opened by permission to get some papers out of the safety deposit vault for a depositor and that is all there is to the story.

HEARING FOR RECEIVER GOES OVER.

complaint plaintiff alleges that he deposited $1,700 in the Bank of Salt Lake on June 22, the day before the bank closed its doors, or rather the day on which it failed to open them. The plaintiff further alleges that the defendants well knew that the bank was insolvent when the deposit was received and asks for judgment for the amount of the deposit and interest from the day of the failure.

The second suit was that of William F. Ford for $1,317.75 with 8. W. Dittman and R. J. Hilton as bondsmen. In this complaint the plaintiff secs forth that he deposited $600 in the Bank of Salt Lake on June 20, 1896, and as a second cause of artion it is alleged that the defendants received deposits from Theresa Ford, the wife of the plaintiff, at various times, the whole aggregating $717.75. It is further alleged that the claim has been assigned to the plaintiff, who therefore asks for judgment for the amount specified.

Of the failure of the First Bank of Mercur, the Mercur Mercury says: The people of Mercur are a little The people of Mercur are a little shy of change today and many of them mourn the loss of their hard-earned savings, which were on deposit in the First Bank of Mercur.
Tuesday morning Cashier Feit received a telephone message stating that James H. Bacon, of the Bank of Sait Lake, had made an assignment to Frank W. Ross, and as the Mercur bank had the bulk of its deposits in the Sait Lake bank, it became necessary to close its doors also.

The Mercur bank had a line of deposits aggregating a large amount.

posits aggregating a large amount, variously estimated at from $25,000 to $35,000, mostly the savings of the people of the camp who are employed by the day or on salary, and aggregating in amounts from a few dollars up to $800 or $1.000.

Of course the failure caused excite-Of course the failure caused excitement and consternation in camp and for a time there was an excited throng of losers around the bank and trouble seemed probable for a time, but the good sense of the people prevented any serious infraction of the law, and the bank was finally deserted. As a last resort many of the depositors attached the bank, but it is not generally suppressed that the variety contains ally supposed that the vault contains more than a few hundred dollars. Mr. Bacon published a statement giving his assets at about $100,000 more than liabilities and stating that every depositor would be paid in full, with interest, but information from other sources is not so hopeful, and it seems probable that a portion, at least, of the loss will never be retrieved.

The depositors generally feel very bitter against Messrs. Bacon and Carter. Mr. Felt, the cashier, was undoubtedly an innocent party, and knew nothing of the impending calamity until the blow felt. party, and impending

NOT AS BAD AS REPORTED.

It will be remembered that some time ago The Heraid published an interview with C. F. Stone of Manad, Idaho, in which that gentleman recited a tale of the capture of a Hermans suspect at Malad. Mr. Stone's account of the affair was very graphic and carried all the component parts that go to make a very good story, but it seems that the gentleman's imagination was more fertile than his recollection accurate, as the incident was made much more of than really occurred, according to the statement of G. W. Neptune, the victim, who arrived in Salt Lake yesterday.

Mr. Neptune stated that he was suspected of being Hermans and was really arrested, but that he had no difficulty in establishing his identity, and that the coloring thrown in by Mr. Stone in the way of a "close proximity to a lynch ng beo" and other claborate details were entirely untrue. Mr. Neptune's account of the affair is vouched for in a letter which he bears from Sheriff Coburn, who made the arrest.

The victim feels that he has been injured very wrongfully and does not consider himself under any especial obligations to Attorney Stone for retailing the story.

seemed to settle matters, so far as rats were concerned, but no sooner were they disposed of than the mice became equally as obnoxious, the rats having left them a fair field.

As he had no mouse trap on the place, Will's borrowed a big cat from one of his neighbors, and last night put Tom in the smokenouse to make a raid on the mice. This morning he visited the scene of baitie, hoping to find the cat master of the situation, with the mice nowhere in evidence. Instead, he found the cat sitting on his haunches the picture of misery, having been outwitted by the designs of the overastute mice.

It seems that Willis had left the big rat trap sitting behind a barrel in the smokehouse, and into this the mice had betaken themselves as soon as they found they were being chased by poor Tom, who had not been able to make an entrance into the barricade of tin and wire. When Willis found the trap there were eleven scared little mice safely housed therein. Thinking, of course, that he had them captured, he fastened Tom in the smokehouse again, and carried the trap outside, setting it down by the door while he went for a kettle of boiling water to demolish the catch at one fel swoop.

But those mice had not lived in vain.

But those mice had not lived in vain. Finding themselves safely outside and beyond the reach of the cat's claws, they lost no time in improving their opportunity for escape afforded by Willis' absence, and made their exit from the big ractrap as easily as they had entered it, and scampered off into safe biding places before another and swifter danger overtook them.—Alexandria, La., Letter to the railadelphia Times.

THE BURR OAK AND DROUTH.

Mr. Roberts of Normal, Neb., says in The Nebraska Farmer that he was proud of his Soft maple grove until the recent drouth came, but now the trees are mostly dead, while his Burr oaks are models of beauty and health. We have this report from all over the Northwest, even up to Devil's Lake, in the far Northwest in grove and as a Northwest, even up to Devil's Lake, in the far Northwest. In grove and as a planted tree no species has stood better than the Burr oak, except possibly the Cut-Leaved birch, on a dry gravel knoll on the college grounds we planted Burr oak accorns in the spring of 1895. They grew rankly to the height of a foot or more last summer, and this spring they started from the terminal bud and have now made a growth of five inches. If the acorns are planted where the trees are to stand, this oak grows as rapidly as the Hard maple, and as the years go on it will not be neglected as now.—Professor J. L. Budd, in Iowa State Register.

Burr oak acorns should be in demand this fall. Get some.

HERMANS CAUGHT

Work on this fence was commenced over a year ago, but as yet only the strip, which bounds the Ochre point side has been completed, and last week the massive wrought iron gates swung to and fro for the first time. The portions of the ence which are to bound the estate on the north and south will not be completed until next summer. Both the fence and gates are made from an Italian design. The base of the former is formed by a wail of Indiana limestone laid on a brick foundation sunk six feet is the ground. At intervals of twenty-five feet rise stone pillars some twelve feet in height and between these is a fence of light handsome wrought iron grillwork.
